(From the Times' Special Correspondent.)

Perhaps the most familiar illustration which can be given of this plan is that of a common oblong spider's web—a series of elongated circles, if we may so term them, crossed by radial paths terminating at last in a garden, in the centre of the huge belt of iron. More than a belt of iron it is in fact a wall with truth to call it, and passing by the Palais d'Industrie of 1855, and down the magnificent avenue of the Champs Elysees, one turns with astonishment into the narrow roads which barely give access to the red, flat, unadorned iron circles which walls in the chief contents of what is to be the great Paris Exhibition of 1867. It is really most difficult to avoid harsh terms in describing its first aspect, and anything which the public fancy can conjure up of deformity in the shape of a half-raised reservoir or a half-ruined gasometer of colossal dimensions, will fall short of its intense, dull, flat, uniform, unadorned ugliness. It is, as we have said, a mere huge girdle of dull red iron, varied here and there by long spaces of flat windows, and containing within its circumference five great inner circles of different heights and widths, but all lower than the outside band or rim, and all, like that, unrelieved either by structural plan or internal ornament. The whole plan of the building is evidently that of a theorist who, in this instance, has ridden his theory rather too hard. It was designed on the idea that it could insure perfect uniformity in all the branches of its display, and the result is that what the building itself contains cannot be well arranged, and there are some fifty or sixty supplementary Exhibitions for which room cannot be found at all scattered over the outside park. In the case of live stock, flowers, &c., this could not be well helped, but it certainly seems a grave defect in the plan to scatter the fine collections sent by the Admiralties and War-offices of foreign countries and place them in a series of detached temporary structures planted here and there about a park of more than sixty acres. It is said that the building has been designed mainly with a view to the convenience of visitors, which is not unlikely to

Exhibition managers and arrangers—gentlemen who had charge at London in 1851, at Paris in 1855, at London again in 1862. Yet the skill and patience of this staff are almost baffled by the obstacles which the form of the building opposes to effective display. In the case of the machinery it is worst of all. There the machines have, of course, to be driven by lathe bands over shafting, and the latter have to be curved involves the necessity of using an immense number of universal joints, which are constantly liable to get out of order. Indeed, so great is this hindrance, that some of the chief English machinists declare they cannot see their way to working their machines at all. Of course these difficulties can be overcome with time, but just now they are difficulties, and very heavy ones. Another objection to the form of the building is that its series of concentric circles, with their dividing walls and partitions, have put an effectual stop to anything like proper ventilation. Already the dust is in motionless clouds without a breath of air to carry it off, and even now, when the sun is out, the atmosphere of the interior is most unpleasantly warm and close. In the "glorious days of July" it will be little short of a gigantic oven. All these, however, are minor deficiencies, which may either be overcome or mitigated, and they certainly sink into insignificance compared with the last and most important deficiency of all. It is with a feeling of reluctance that I mention it, and not with a view of exciting uneasiness, but simply in the discharge of my duty as recording facts. The truth is, then, that the Paris Exhibition building is built with the most entire disregard of all the dangers that may arise from fire—in other words, it is one of the most elaborately constructed bonfires ever put together. With the exception of the picture gallery walls and the outer iron covering, the whole interior is a web of the lightest wooden screens, which are hereafter to be formed into alcoves, and draped with net and muslin curtains. Anything more inflammable, therefore, than this

The papers abound in cases of infidelity to marital engagements by the lately married being thrown into the society of men of leisure, their husbands being engaged in their business pursuits. The mere dandy, loafer, or gentleman of leisure, has every opportunity of taste, and dress, and address, above that of the man of business, to turn away a woman's heart from her husband. The mere fact of the husband coming from her first, without engaging her husband to draw unfavourable comparisons against her husband as to personal tidiness. One of the most splendid weddings that had ever taken place in New York resulted in a separation, and a broken heart, and a prolonged illness, and a year, by the wife's continued twitting her husband, who was walking on Broadway or on the Avenue, about the taste in the selection of his apparel. "Why don't you bow as Mr. Blank does?" "His gloves are in perfect taste; yours are such a countryman would say."

These things grow upon her, while they alienate him, and living as they did at the finest level of society, with uncounted gold at their command, and noth-

THE DIAGAS COLLECTION

(From the Daily Telegraph.)

THE Chancellor of the Exchequer had to propose votes for the enrichment of the National Art and Manufacture Museum, and the purchase he had, upon his official responsibility, effected was the purchase of the celebrated Blacas Collection—one of the most famous and brilliant in Europe, and splendid in comparison with any other ever collected under a private roof. These masterpieces were gathered together by the Duke of the Vaudouais; there may be in some of the Venetian, Neapolitan, and Florentine palaces more numerous and sumptuous assemblages of typical specimens; but there is no other so rich in the variety of the objects from the choice and taste of an individual, and so pervasively artistic feeling and grace of antiquarian ideal. The late Duke of Blacas was not merely a singular collector, but a scholar; and he did not simply exploit the Continent for the sake of his acquisitions, but, in fact, criticised the accumulated beauties of the ancient museum, generally private, and purchased for his own. The wonder is that upon his decease we have not had the same results as we have had in the case of the Duke of Devonshire, and the amount to which the Chancellor, the Exchequer consented for the purchase on the part of the nation was curiously insignificant; it represented, indeed, only the purchase of an original collection of a quarter of a million sterling—less than the nation has obtained a public treasure at the cost of scarcely more than one-fifth of its conventional value. The

CONFEDERATION OF BRITISH AMERICA

(From the Toronto Herald, February 1.)

Intelligence has come to us through the Atlantic cable that the Imperial Government has agreed to the basis of union as retouched by the delegates of British Columbia, New Brunswick, and Newfoundland. The delegates of the latter two provinces were not represented in this last conference of delegates; and their adhesion to the union must be left optional. It is not probable that there will any difficulty with Newfoundland; and Prince Edward Island seems to be only standing out for a price. The doubt that has been mentioned above embraces all the provinces will be over. It is not England that is here; but this defect will not allowed to retard the work of union.

The Intercolonial railway is an essential part of the scheme of confederation; without it no union would in fact be possible. The cost of the line is estimated at $20,000,000, which amount, or very near it, will have to be guaranteed by the Imperial Government. The advantage of this will be that the capital will be loaned on favourable terms; something less than for the purchase of American iron. It is no new thing to construct railroads for great distances in the wilderness; and this road will besides furnish

TELEGRAPHIC MESSAGES.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.]

WEST MAINTLAND.

The Circuit Court commenced to-day before the Chief Justice, the Solicitor-General prosecuting. The barristers present were Messrs. Windyler, Widson, Blake, Bennett, Healy, and Pilcher. H. B. Sores was indicted and found guilty of stealing a saddle, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment. John Dalton, charged with two charges of larceny, was sentenced to seven years on the road. George Watson was found guilty of stealing, sum of money, sentence deferred. Edward Davidson and Alexander Gray, out on bail, were called to take their trial, and, not appearing, their recognizances were ordered to be returned. The Court then adjourned till to-morrow.

BATHURST.

At the Circuit Court, yesterday, Barnum M. Evans, charged with an indecent assault, was acquitted, and stands remanded upon a similar charge till next court. William Peters, charged with wounding with intent to murder a little girl named Faith Perkins, at Orange, was next put upon his trial. The case disclosed the most revolting circumstances, and the Court sat until 1 o'clock, when the jury found the prisoner guilty. He was then sentenced to death, without hope of mercy. During the delivery of the sentence the prisoner fell in a swoon. This morning the trial of an aboriginal named Jacko, for murder, was postponed till next Circuit. This would have ended the Criminal business, but it was discovered that a prisoner, named Harry, remanded from the Mudgee Quarter Sessions, should have been forwarded to this Court, but was not. There is a hitch in consequence. The civil business has commenced with the part hearing of the case Hughes and another v. the Bank New South Wales.

MELBOURNE.

The review yesterday at Sandbury was a great success; 2146 took part, it included 318 of the 11th Regiment. The troops were under the command of General Carey, who attacked a position defended by Colonel Anderson and a party of Volunteers. The men behaved well. A mine was exploded at the right moment, and without accident. There were 11,000 visitors present.

THE BISHOP OF GOSFORTH.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY FOR ENGLAND.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS.]

NEWSPAPERS.

The steamship Mataru, with the English mails for February, via Panama and New Zealand, did not arrive at Sydney until the 15th of the month, upwards of a fortnight behind her time. Her long passage was occasioned by having had Welsh coal, which burnt away too fast.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY'S STEAMSHIP HOMBAY.

The P. and O. Company's steamship Hombay, with the English mails for February, via Suva, arrived at Sydney on the 16th, two days in advance of her contract time.

Parliament has been further prorogued to the 14th of June, and probably it will not meet till the latter end of June.

The results of the Postal Conference, composed of delegates from all the Australian colonies which recently sat in Melbourne, were made public simultaneously in all the colonies on the 28th March. The agreement of the Conference proposes to maintain three lines of communication with Europe, as at present, via Suva, Torres Straits, and Panama, so as to ensure, as nearly as possible, a fortnightly service in which all the colonies shall participate. The expense of maintaining these three lines is estimated at about £400,000 per annum, which the Imperial Government is to be asked to contribute one-half. The Sydney Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution in support of the agreement of the Conference.

The inquiry in reference to the recent defalcations of the Public Works department has terminated, but the result has not yet been made public.

The direct line of telegraph between Sydney and Adelaide is now completed, and will be opened in the course of a fortnight.

Captain Cadell, in charge of a well-equipped party, has recently left in the steamer Eagle, accompanied by the steam-tender Firefly, for Torres Straits, for the purpose of exploring the seaboard and country of North Australia.

Public attention in the colony has recently been directed to the Island of New Guinea, and an attempt is being made to form a company, whose object is to explore and colonize the island.

Immense quantities of rain have fallen in the colony during the month, and some parts have been visited by floods, accompanied in some instances by loss of life. Grass is now plentiful in the interior, and the stock is in a hopeful state.

The coast has been visited by a severe storm, causing shipwreck and some loss of life. The ship Ethiopian, from Melbourne to Shanghai, with coal on board, and knocking about in a disabled state several days, when she was picked up and towed in to Sydney by the French war steamer Marguerite.

A disastrous fire occurred in Sydney on the 18th instant, resulting in the destruction of property to the value of nearly £20,000.

A very successful night attack and sham fight among the Volunteers took place on the 17th.

A series of simultaneous rifle matches against the enemies of Great Britain, in which our riflemen acquitted themselves creditably, came off during the month.

The arrivals from England have been:—Western Chief, of the Nations, Princess Beatrice, Lochiel, and Dunbar Castle, all from London.

The following ships have sailed for London:—William Duthie, Christians Thompson, Sobran, John Masterman, and Sea Breeze.

Exchange on London for 60 day bills, 1 percent premium; buying rate, 4 percent premium. Discount rate unaltered.

The revenue for the quarter ending 31st ultimo amounted to £455,925 18s. 2d., being over £5000 less than the receipts for the corresponding period of last year.

The amount of gold received from the various gold-fields during last month was 16,796 oz., making a total for the quarter of 45,738 oz.—a decrease of 5010 oz. on the quarter of 1896.

HOMERUSH EASTER RACE MEETING.

HOMERUSH EASTER RACE MEETING.

The annual race meeting at Homerush terminated yesterday with some excellent sport, but without any improvement on the state of the course or in the state of the weather.
